STL and Emerging eBook Business Models
Guest Editors, Rebecca Seger and Lenny Allen

STL and Emerging eBook Business Models.....	1	DDA In Context.....	20
by Rebecca Seger and Lenny Allen — We haven't entirely moved on, and the sea of scholarly communications, the one in which we all swim, continues to be roiled by Short-Term Loans (STL) and other evolving and emerging business models.		Defining a Comprehensive eBook Acquisition Strategy in an Access-driven World by Jason Price and Maria Savova — If libraries ensure that any money saved via DDA and STL in a given year is immediately reinvested in books, that would go a long way toward supporting the path to ongoing book publishing sustainability.

The Evolving DDA Project at the Orbis Cascade Alliance.....	10	Reflections on the 2011 PDA issue ...	26
by Kathleen Carlisle Fountain — DDA let us collectively own and share a variety of eBooks that had demonstrated value to the membership.		by Xan Arch — Xan was curious what the authors from the 2011 ATG issue on PDA thought about their articles now and how PDA has changed since then.

Academic Libraries and the Scholarly Book Marketplace: Death by 1,000 [Paper]Cuts?.....	14	STL: A Publisher's Perspective	28
by Michael Zeoli — It is what has happened since 2011-2012, and particularly over the past two years, that has caused high anxiety among publishers and is causing many to reconsider the models in which they had agreed to participate. This will have consequences for library content access and acquisition.		by Rebecca Seger and Lenny Allen — Publishers, by and large, have made a commitment to supporting libraries in their desire not to pay for content until there is use.
		An Interview with Kari Paulson.....	32
		VP, Market Development, ProQuest Books by Rebecca Seger and Lenny Allen — It's just easier to dip into something you can cut incrementally (books) vs. something you cut off totally, like a journals collection.

Evidence-Based Selection at the University of Denver	18	Op Ed — I, Library	34
by Michael Levine-Clark — As with any DDA program, it requires the library and vendor to work together to identify the right mix of titles to make available to users relative to the amount of money committed.		by Lura D. Sanborn — Will Watson predict our information needs, answering them before we even know we have them?
		Back Talk — I'm a Publisher Too! ...	94
		by Ann Okerson — There exists an immense number of kinds and types and shapes and business models of publishing activity.
